IMPORTANT UPDATE(S)

Arizona Construction Career Days connects thousands of students to industry opportunities

Arizona Construction Career Days (AZCCD) brought energy, opportunity and hands-on learning to its two-day event on March 26-27, welcoming more than 4,000 students from 129 high schools across Arizona. The event was made possible through the support of dedicated volunteers, exhibitors and sponsors by a range of industry partners, including the Arizona Department of Transportation (ADOT).

Students stepped outside the classroom to connect directly with industry professionals through interactive activities and live demonstrations. They explored a variety of skilled trades, gaining firsthand experience with the tools, equipment and techniques used on real job sites. This exposure showcased the diverse career pathways within construction and emphasized the many opportunities available in a field essential to Arizona's continued growth and infrastructure development.

AZCCD serves as an important bridge between education and industry, inspiring the next generation of builders and helping to strengthen the state's future workforce. With strong participation from schools and industry partners, the event highlights the value of early career exploration and long-term workforce development.
